Easy Victory for Blairmore Hockey Players

The Blairmore hockey players defeated a strong aggregation from Cowley on the Blairmore rink on Saturday evening last by a score of 6-3. The visitors arrived on the "local" shortly after 7 p.m. and the game was started about 80 minutes later. In the first half, Blairmore scored six goals while their opponents made one. In the second half although the home team played around the visitors' goal during the greater part of the time, they did not succeed in bulging the net but by two clever shots by Labrie, one shot on a pass from Sharp, the visitors secured 2 goals.

There were over a hundred present, many of whom were out-of-town folk. The game was interesting and was practically void of dirty or unfair play. Both teams deserve credit for the splendid exhibition of the great winter game which so many delight to witness. By a very clever play, Clarkson scored the first goal that was made by the visitors. Lewis got in a good piece of work when he broke through the visitors and scored for Blairmore. Goddard and Turner played remarkably well and so did all the players. The line up was as follows:

Blairmore	Cowley
Dellis	goal
Lewis	point
Shers	c. p.
Turner	rever
Goddard	centre
Horton	l. wing
Baker	r. wing
	Clarkson

Sport is Abused

On Sunday evening a large number of people attended the Central Baptist Church and listened to an able discourse by the pastor, Rev. J. F. Hunter, on the subject: "Lessons Learned From a Hockey Game?" The preacher took as his text: "I press toward the goal for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The speaker said that amateur sport was a splendid thing if conducted properly, but the betting indulged in at most of the games was deplorable and had a tendency to degeneracy. The users of obscene talk came in for some criticism as well as the bettors, and the reverend gentleman declared that the language indulged in by many of the spectators was far from being elevating. He hoped to see a speedy end to this unpleasant state of affairs.

The speaker held the closest attention of his audience while he delivered unto them a sermon of great length and much interest. He dwelt for some time on the goals to one of which each of us is destined, and impressed upon his hearers the necessity of playing a good clean honest game all through life so that they may at last reach that goal of which St. Paul speaks in his epistle to the Philippians.

Jack Frost Lingers

This district is suffering from a long visit from Jack Frost and his exit is anxiously looked for by all excepting the coal and wood dealer. On Friday last the thermometer dropped to 41 below zero and it has hovered around in that neighborhood almost continuously ever since. Many a check that heretofore had never been touched by anybody, is now suffering from Jack's heartless use, and the unkind words that have been showered upon our lingering visitor would fill volumes.

Officers of the Keystone Portland Cement Co

As announced in these columns over four months ago a huge cement plant, employing 100 men and having a capacity of over 1000 barrels of cement daily, will be erected this year at the extreme west end of Frank, near the famous sulphur spring, and within a few hundred yards of the Rocky Mountain Cement Company's at the east end of Blairmore.

Since the announcement which was made exclusively by us, sufficient capital has been subscribed to thoroughly finance this great industry, and the following officers have been elected:

President - A. Muller, of Frank and Paris, general manager of the Canadian Coal Consolidated Co. of Frank.

Vice president - E. A. Cummings, Lethbridge, manager of the Rodgers-Cunningham Lumber Co.

Directors - Peter Lund, Warden, B.C., managing director of the Crow's Nest Pass Lumber Co.

O. S. Chapin, of the Chapin Co., W. J. Budd, director British Columbia Cement Co., Princeton, B.C.

A. Schmidt, banker, Brussels, Belgium.

J. E. Moreau, mine operator, Mons, Belgium.

W. F. Lent, barrister, Calgary.

J. E. Woods, civil engineer, Finlay Creek.

Coleman Notes

W. H. Murr and G. Clair were in Frank on Monday.

The store formerly conducted here by A. J. White has been taken over by a Macleod man.

The recent cold weather has played mischief with numerous physiognies here and all the folk are anxious for a chinook.

E. Matthews has returned to Coleman after spending nearly two years on the prairies where he has taken up a homestead.

Miss Bansmore, formerly of Lundbreck but now of Carmangay, will take a position in the post office here immediately upon the change of postmasters.

Many of our citizens are very indignant over the way some of the local hockey players acted here on Friday evening by importing some professionals to engage in a game against Pincher Creek. The result was that after about 200 spectators had gathered to witness the game it was announced that because of Coleman's conduct there would be no play and that the visitors would be rewarded the game by default.

Fire at Frank

On Saturday morning last, at about ten o'clock, a fire started in the home of William Morgan, opposite the tipple, at Frank. The fire was caused by a defective fuse and was first discovered by Mrs. Morgan who immediately upon the discovery attempted to extinguish the flames, after making several unsuccessful attempts to master the fire she informed the neighbors of what was threatening to destroy her home. The fire brigade was soon in attendance and succeeded in saving all the furniture but not until after the dwelling had become practically destroyed. Mr. Morgan was working at the mine at the time of the fire. The dwelling was partly covered by insurance.

BINGS' BARGAIN

And the Way He Turned His Purchase to Account.

By LAURA ALTON PAYNE

"What dat, Bings?" cooed the dimpled cherub, patting the bald spot that spread like a small shining desert in an oasis of thick blond hair on Bings' well shaped head.

Whitlock grinned.

"Mamma's pet mustn't be ugly," said the pretty widow, turning her brown eyes apologetically on Bings. "Come to mamma, dearie. Mr. Bings isn't used to 'em."

But the dimpled cherub, otherwise, Bings' only pleasure, presently lay at Bings' main bidding, situated upon the rustic seat occupied by Bings, for whom she had elicited a decided partiality from the start, only snuggled closer to the "secretly delighted Bings and cooed, 'Baby 'ore Bings,' then as a happy, though slightly dimpled, baby at which frank and wholly unexpected revelation of her small daughter the pretty widow's face raved Bings.

Whitlock guffawed. "Now's your chance, Bings," he urged with a gleam of mischief in his eye, "to make a bargain. Wait a minute, and for the cowardly despot of the pretty widow to bid Whitlock's capricious fancy."

Bings paused at his own gate and gazed miserably at the big silent house. Behind his eyes were pangs and longings to be the pretty widow and to be cherubs sitting on the frost porch. It was a blissful vision, but Bings felt that it would never become a blissful reality unless a miracle happened.

Bings was a bachelorette. Bings was big and strong, but he was a plain, fat, fu-in-fu. Bings was a whole swarm of "H's." Bings' escape being a beauty with his baby complexion and innocent blue eyes. His size was the result that said him from this time on. And, as Whitlock said, a bargain feeds. No woman could scrounge a bargain fairer than could Billy Bings. Incidentally Billy was the climax to Bings' woes. But no persuasion on his part could convince him of the absurdity of calling it a foot-long.

Bings' bachelorthood was a condition of neither birth nor achievement—it was thrust upon him. During his evolution into that state there had been a time when he had been only too happy to have endowed with half his worldly goods but for his excessive bashfulness. Never yet had he been able to screw his courage up to the point of proposal, though he had made a superhuman effort in that direction.

This seemed a pity, for Bings was undeniably cut out for a Benedict. He thought all women angels and all bachelorettes devils. And, as the momentous morning after his precipitate flight Bings had a peculiar cherub in mind—a pretty, brown eyed, dimpled cherub that he would give half his worth to possess. The other cherubs, the other bachelorettes, he had known erred mother. But so far every glance from Mrs. Jessie Moffat's yoghish eyes had produced the unfortunate effect of instantaneous paralysis of poor Bings' tongue, so that he could only stammer and blushing stammer like an ally schoolboy.

This was the first time by any means that Bings had performed that metaphorical feat. It had been at least a semiweekly occurrence for several months past. Each time Bings vowed to himself that this time he would not the fool. But he did. He had reached the point where the inevitable mental fear was copiously punctuated with a vigorous ejaculation that would have shocked the pretty widow had she been there.

Bings felt his helplessness bitterly. So absorbed was he in his thought as he picked his way along the shady street that he failed to observe the widow a block or so ahead of him. A deep, clear laugh from Bings' soul that night June morning.

"Confound it!" he muttered. "If something doesn't happen soon I'll—Going, going—gone!"

Bings picked up his pace and hastened to know it. Turning a corner, he came full upon a familiar scene just as a table was knocked down to the highest bidder. Bings' eyes glowed over the unusual display of household goods.

"Five cents!" bid a voice in the crowd as the auctioneer held up an article. It was Whitlock's voice. Bings' wrath flamed up, and before he had time to think he was bidding furiously against his rival. For a moment of time he was the only bidder on Whitlock. Bings rapidly became possessor of various articles that were of as much use to him as that part of his existence as a celestial harp and a pair of wings. Had Bings interpreted that the auctioneer had been sent to him, the purchases he might have been more cautious. As it was, the barricade around Bings grew and grew.

"Going, going—gone!" shouted the auctioneer. An instant later, that Mr. Whitlock. Sam, who when the personulator around to Mr. Bings."

"Parasolador! Heaven! Had he bought a parasolador? Bings wiped his perspiring brow and gazed daintily around.

"Why, Billy Bings!" cried a laughing feminine voice at his elbow. "What are you out with a parasolador?"

Bings' exasperated gaze encountered that of Mrs. Murston, a merry faced woman. By her side stood the pretty widow, her cooed cherub clinging to her hand.

Bings turned very red and caught wildly at his hat, or where he supposed it to be, only to find that he was fanning himself with it. Making an embarrasment, he tried to mop his brow.

"Here's yer parabola!" said Sam laconically, pausing in front of Bings. Bings turned fascinated eyes on the thing, which seemed to him to have greatly increased in size during his absence. The auctioneer stood by.

"And it's baby's high chair!" announced another laughing voice as the speaker crawled forward and inspected Bings' barbadoes.

There was a general craning of necks. "And a little red rocker," exclaimed another.

"A dol— and a doll carriage."

"Footstool, workbasket, sewing chaise and sewing machine," enumerated Whitlock, pointing nearer. "Great ju—p—What do you mean?"

"The natives stuck away, sickened and disheveled. The framework of their fanatical self sacrifice had been cut away from beneath them at a single blow. Their old practices would no longer exist them. To those who van amuck, and who had been cut off from their native home, but the fiercest hell. The occasion for the sacrifice was removed. Its rewards were taken away. It ceased to be.

"As far as is known the incident of the pig occurred but once in the campaign among the Maoris. The natives, however, in the practice of running amuck almost disappeared. There has been an occasional cropping out of the practice. These have mostly been in the outlying provinces, to which the tale of the American method of battling with the practice has not penetrated."

TAMED THE MOROS.

A Ceremony That Forced Them to Stop Running Amuck.

More zealots do not run amuck as frequently as they used to do, largely because of a plan conceived by Lieutenant Miller, a volunteer officer from Chicago, described in the New York Tribune. When Datto Call was killed in the Philippines, the Moros, a tribe of natives, his body was buried with a degree of ceremony which greatly pleased the natives and correspondingly depressed the American soldiers. The denouement is thus described: "Two American soldiers with a pig between them approached the body of the dead chief, and the pig was stoned to death over the animal's throat. The blood of it gushed into the grave and upon the remains of the dead chief. His body must have been covered with a thick, black, sticky substance."

Bings' exasperated gaze encountered that of Mrs. Murston, a merry faced woman. By her side stood the pretty widow, her cooed cherub clinging to her hand.

"Here's yer parabola!" said Sam laconically, pausing in front of Bings. Bings turned fascinated eyes on the thing, which seemed to him to have greatly increased in size during his absence. The auctioneer stood by.

TALKED IT TO DEATH.

How Tom Carter Killed a Bill and Won a Commissionhip.

Senator Tom Carter of Montana retired at the last session. He retired before, but came back after six months, and they say he may do that again.

Last time Senator Carter retired it was in a blaze of glory. He was about as unpopular with congress as the day before public life as a man could well be. It had been a hard life.

The house had passed a $50,000,000 bill and harbor bill, and it had been reported to the senate. McKinley didn't want to veto it and also didn't want it to pass. He sent for Carter. Tradition says he spoke in substance like this:

"Tom, if you will keep still, engineer that river and harbor bill to the right place and then talk it to death with killing anything else you can have a commission to the U.S. Steel Corporation."

"I'm off to the west," said Senator Tom.

It was too. Nobody suspected it. It was the best kept secret anybody remembers. The decks cleared some dozen hours before the adjournment time, Carter got the door and made the speech of his life. For twelve hours he had been talking, and when he was through he had a speech of his own.

Expresses Regrets

To the Editor Blairmore Enterprise

Dear Sir,

I should feel grateful if you would kindly insert this letter in your valuable paper and say how truly sorry I was to be compelled to cancel my date (January 10th) at your local opera house, owing to the inclemency of the weather. I feel sure the people of Blairmore, Frank, Belleyue and surrounding district will understand.

I have one of the most expensive travelling combinations in Canada at the present day and cannot do exactly as I wish in consequence.

However, I will play "The Private Secretary" on my return from Vancouver early in March.

Yours faithfully

C. JAMES BANCROFT

In despair he was forced to get help to get it removed and placed where it belonged. He declares he was perfectly sober. - W. T. Y.

Editorial Notes

The man who advertises belongs to the hive of industry, but he who does not advertise is a drone upon the commercial world.

This is a truthful saying and worthy of acceptance by all ice packers and skating rink managers, that this is ideal weather for freezing water.

With one cement works at the east end of Blairmore and another one at the west end of Frank - only a few hundred yards from each other - the chances of the two towns becoming cemented together and made into one, are assuming a concrete form.

We understand that Dr. W. T. Grenfell will address a public gathering at Lethbridge in March next. No doubt the people of the city to the east of us will then hear some more highly colored, pitiful and heart-touching bogus stories about the land in which the doctor has grown immensely rich.

The readers of this paper are asked to kindly patronize those whose advertisements appear herein. The business men who are using this journal as a means to advertise their goods carry a good stock and they are not ashamed of what they are selling, while those who are not advertising are not looking for business. See!

The man or woman who has time enough to keep up with every little whimsical piece of gossip about their neighbors, about the town, about anything, anybody and everybody - such a man or such a woman should enjoy our Christian sympathy. They are usually in good and perfectly harmless, yet their deplorable condition of mind should elicit our kindly feeling.

The Bull Bird
(From the Pincher Creek Echo.)

The Macleod Advertiser in a recent issue handed the following to its readers: "Blairmore wants occupied lands taxed to provide funds for exterminating gophers. This particular stone hits two birds squarely on the bullseye. The bill should pass?" Don't like to accuse the Advertiser of speaking in mixed metaphors, but we would really like to know what kind of a bird it is that has bollies.

Crow's Nest Pass Electric Railway and is already tapped by the Pass line of the C. P. R., while the G. N. R. has already approached to within a few score of miles and must eventually pass through this admirably located town.

Lake City

Is located by the shore of Crow's Nest Lake, only a few miles east of the provincial boundary between Alberta and British Columbia, and just north of the international line.
In reality, it is at the top of Canada where the majestic Rockies tower in serene magnificence over great chasms and numerous falls, reflecting their presence on the waters of this beautiful lake. Here also are afforded the very best tasks for the daring mountain climber and for huntsman who desires to outrival the quiet ways of the Rocky Mountain goat, sheep, deer or elk, which are the monarchy thereon.
In close proximity are numerous timber, mineral and fuel resources, development of which is now in its initial stages.
These resources include gold quartz, coal, iron and pulp wood.
Crow's Nest Lake has long been looked upon with promise as an admirable location for health and tourist resorts, and but now this promise is being realized. Plans for hotels, etc.
are being arranged, as well as boat houses, and the most modern pleasure yachts will soon glide over the surface of this beautiful lake.

But a few weeks ago lots were placed on the market, and the agents have had their hands full attending to purchasers.
Prices run from $150 up. For further particulars

The World's Greatest Male Voice Choir

No musical event in the Dominion since the famous tour of the Sheffield Choir last spring is of greater interest than the tour of the Royal Moelwyn Male Choir. The choir consists of 25 admirably-trained Welsh vocalists, their repertoire an extensive one and a large part of every performance is devoted to Welsh National music.

The Canadian tour commences with concerts at Montreal and the choir will travel through to Vancouver and back, taking in all important points.

An opportunity will be given music lovers of The Pass to hear this famous aggregation on Tuesday, January 23rd, at the Blairmore Opera House. The tour is being conducted for a philanthropic purpose. It has been arranged by David Davies, the wealthy ship-builder of Wales, for the purpose of raising money for the suppression of tuberculosis in the gallant little principality, and the twenty-five accomplished vocalists are giving their services free. Already these crusaders have raised $500,000, and a further $100,000 is needed.

BOY ON RAMPAGE.

Humpy Skinner Runs Amuck With a Wheelbarrow.

HE CLEARS THE SIDEWALKS.

Wild Chase After a Companion Results in Serious Damage to All Who Got in the Way—After Committing Many Assaults He Fails to Errand.

By M. QUAD. Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

It was a new experience in the life of Humpy Skinner, aged fourteen. New experiences had been coming to him every day since he was old enough to realize that a licking always followed his breaking a pane of glass, but this was something out of the ordinary.

He had been sent with a wheelbarrow to get a lumber or so of sand for household purposes, and no sooner had he started out than he began to feel the consciousness of power. Pedestrians gave the wheelbarrow and the boy a wide berth. Both men and women saw that no more deadly combination existed, while younger and smaller folks had something yet to learn.

Up near the corner was an oldish man leaning against the fence as he surveyed a vacant house with a to rent sign on the door. He was wondering how many rooms the house contained, and how many were contained, when Humpy Skinner noticed him and tried an experiment. He shut his eyes tightly and tried to see how near he could come to the man's heels with his wheelbarrow. He had no management of his feet to get him so far off his mark that he ran the wheel plumb against the leaning man and knocked his legs out from under him. "By jingo, but what are you trying to do?" shouted the man as he struggled up.

"TRYED TO CRIPPLE ME, DID YOU?"

"I thought I would see how near I could graze you," was the calm reply. "Oh, you did eh? Then you willfully, deliberately and maliciously that infernal thing against my legs in the hope of crippling me for life, did you? Boy, lemme get hold of you once."

But Humpy drew back with the wheelbarrow and stood ready to repeat an assault, and the man rubbed his left leg and continued:

"Are you such a lunkhead that you don't know it's better to have an infernal machine? You have no right running it on the sidewalk. Begone with it before I get my paws on you. The idea of turning a boy of your age loose to maim and cripple and slaughter!"

Humpy was suppressed for the moment, but when he had his freedom after two collisions with the fence and safely turned the next corner—that is, it was safety for him, but in turning he drove three pedestals off the sidewalk, and one of them came near falling on the pavement and recovered him to safety.

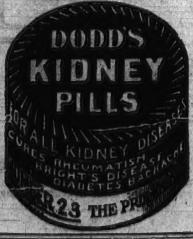

"Boy, why didn't they give you a pack of dynamite and turn you loose? By George, but it's got so that a man's life isn't safe even on the roof of his own house."

Asked to Suck Eggs.

Two men who had been in a scuffle came down the street on the opposite side. He had been to the grocery and had a dozen eggs and three bars of soap under his arm.

"Hello, Humpy! Where you going?" he called.

"After sand."

W. N. U. No. 878

"COME OVER HERE AND SICK BODD EGGS."

It was a great temptation to Humpy. He had sucked eggs before, and his mother had told him that he had remembered how special and satisfactory the yolks had slipped down his throat and brought complacency to him for an hour afterward. That was before he had ever started to run a wheelbarrow on the sidewalk, however. "The boy who can't run a wheelbarrow was a boyish trick and beneath his dignity." He had seen that men and women were afraid of his barrow, and he wondered if boys would be if Tim Jackson would. The only way to find out was to make a test.

Chase the Jackson Boy.

While the eyes of the other boy were upon him in envious mood Humpy rose up, grasped the handles of the barrow and made a furious dash across the street. Had it been a runaway ice wagon Tim would have stopped behind the nearest shade tree. As it was, he had to stop and consider moving about things that he turned and fled are the barrow was within ten feet of him. Humpy uttered a warwhoop and pursued, and eggs and soap were scattered on the sidewalk.

No living man or boy can push a wheelbarrow very far in a straight line, and Tim Jackson was no exception.

When he comes to a run his course is like a rail fence. In going a block Humpy tickled the legs of half a dozen men, almost ran into three trees and scared a grocer's horse into a runaway, but his barrow didn't burst until he struck a fat man and brought him down with a great crash.

Take the Fat Man.

A cobbler ran out of his shop and seized the boy and the barrow until it could be ascertained whether the fat man had been killed on the spot or only crippled for life. It was two minutes before the question was decided. Then the fat man rose up and began to talk. He called Humpy Skinner about a hundred bad names. He threatened him with over 200 kinds of punishment. He abused his father and mother, and the boy did rip that old wheelbarrow up the back but a new wrinkle in the wheel.

"I don't know what this is all about," said Humpy when the fat man had finally got out of breath.

"I don't know what you do when you are not coming, why didn't you climb a fence or dodge into a store?"

"Hear the cold blooded villain talk!" groaned the victim. "Why, boy, why—why?"

Dog Was Unconscious.

And then he awoke up again and grew red in the face and gasped for breath and could say no more. The cobbler went to put him on the back and lead him into a sewing machine shop with a large six-handled machine were sold on the highroad and Humpy took advantage of the occasion to mink his escape.

He was sobered up a little as he passed on, but only for a short time. He saw a large dog standing on the street while its master was in the store to get something for a cold in the head. The dog ran across the street at a red-headed boy, who was washing a store window, and he hadn't the slightest idea that his life was in peril. No sooner had Humpy caught sight of the canine fiend than he dashed out to seize the dog in the middle of the street, the wheel of his barrow and threw him thirty feet high, the same as if he had been caught on a cwortheter.

Wild Stories Circulated.

It was a run of a hundred feet, with no one in the way, and Humpy got upstream to get something for a cold in the head. The dog was still a red-headed boy and wondering if he ever staled harvest apples out of the country when all at once the wheel struck him. He went down instead of up, and Humpy and the barrow went over him.

Boy, dog and barrow were piled in a heap. The dog recovered himself first and bit the boy, and the barrow and Humpy's bowis soon collected a crowd. Some of the said that a man had been hit by a wheelbarrow and others that a street urchin had run over a coal dealer, but the policeman who came running up soon straightened out things.

"I want this boy hanged to a tree for trying to kill my dog," demanded the owner as that cold in head grew worse.

"I can't do that," replied the officer, "but if I ever catch him out with a wheelbarrow again shall go to state prison. Boy, take your infernal machine and make for home!"

"Where's the sand, Humpy?" asked his master as he came limping into the house.

In reply he burst into tears.

"Dear me, but what is the matter with you?"

The Most Venomous Snake.

The most venomous of snakes is said to be the Echis carinatus of India, about which there is a legend of a serpent's curse. "The curse is death itself, and carries in its head the secret of destroying life with the venomous fangs of all the poisons."

The Echis is a common Indian snake, found in nearly every part of the peninsula.

Fortunately, however, for man, the snake is not a very sober creature, for its aggressive habits would make it infinitely more fatal to life than its deadly relative.

Paid His Debt.

The editor of a well-known daily paper was very fond of a dog and has the good sense to appreciate one at that. He had one dog, but when meeting a friend and a disdained looking Irishman lounging up against a corner, "Watch me and see if I can't make that dog bite his master," he said. "Look and see if his face won't be a study." They were soon abreast of the Irishman and the editor, with his silver hair and as he thrust it into the man's hand, "Heaven bless you and amen," I'll never say another word," said the Irishman, "but here his eyes twinkled merrily, "you see, you said it, the dog's a harridan." The friend ran away, the editor blushed to the roots of his hair. He exclaimed: "Oh, pay the man to let him go, I can't stand the sight of a pale, thin harridan." The Irishman got his gun, but the editor no longer plays imaginary dolls.

"Hear about the revolution in China?" asked the editor. "Well, I don't know if it's a new set of Haydn. What is the new style?"—Houston Post

"No, madam; I am not a poet," declared the colonial contemptuously. "But surely," exclaimed the gushing young girl at his side, "you admit that the men of general culture."

"Certainly, but I don't admire flights of any kind!" retorted the brave colonel. "Would I be in the army if I did?"

She gazed him a despairing glance. How disappointing he was! And how truly unromantic these military men were!

"Would you never be thrilled, colonel," she asked, making a final appeal, "by such verses, as this? It is out of 'The Day is Done,' you know, and it is a poem of great beauty." The colonel, however, was not to be won over by the beauty of the poem.

"By Jove! (these poems do occasionally hit the mark, after all!)—exclaimed the colonel, waking up suddenly. "Don't you know, Arabo, that the beggars would steal anything?"

Frank at Pincher Creek

On Wednesday, Jan. 3rd, the Frank hockey team with a good crowd of supporters journeyed to Pincher Creek and met with their first defeat of the season, being beaten by a score of 6-1. As the Frank team was short two men, Dawson and McLeod, the score was not so large as was expected by the Frank supporters.

The game, which was called for 7:30 p.m., was as usual, rather late in starting so it was decided to play two 25 minute halves. The game started with both teams working hard and roughing it to a considerable extent. About half way through the first half, referred to T. Moore stopped the play and told both teams that unless they cut out the rough stuff he would be obliged to send the whole fourteen men to the fence. After this warning both teams settled down somewhat and played better hockey. Gillespie scored the first goal for Plucher. McGowan of Frank putting one in shortly after and tying the score. Daper landed another for Plucher leaving the score 2-2 at half time.

In the second half Frank tried hard to hold its own; at times having the whole team, with the exception of the goal tender, playing in Plucher's net. Their efforts were of no avail however, for Waugh of Plucher, taking advantage of Frank's defence playing out so far, scored four goals. Considerable rough work was indulged in and kept the referee busy handing out penalties during this half. Much credit is due Mr. Moore on the capable manner in which he handled the game.

Rhynes played goal and Danlon played left wing for Frank. McMillan played right wing for Plucher Creek. The other players were those who met at Frank on Friday.

Whiller and Harvey Murphy, were amongst the number. The following is the result of the voting with the first three named elected as councillors for 1912:

Harvey Murphy	37

Will Give the Law Strict Observance

A meeting of the Crows Nest Pass Liquor Association was held at the Frank hotel on Monday morning. The business included the election of the delegates to attend a convention of the liquor people to be held in the city of Calgary on the 25th inst. A price list, affecting both the wholesale and retail dealers, was passed on.

The secretary, W. H. Murr, advocated for strict observance of the liquor law, and acting on Mr. Christie's suggestion, each member put up $100 which amount will be forfeited by the person violating the law in any form. No doubt this will tend toward a continuation of well and orderly conducted licensed hotels in this and other towns in the Pass.

Pincher at Frank

For the second time this season Frank was defeated by the Pincher Creek team here on Friday afternoon the score being 3-2. The game from start to finish was a poor exhibition of hockey and was any body's game until the final whistle blew. Pincher was out by superior team work, the Frank boys failing to play combination but, depending too much on individual play.

In the first twenty minutes the play was rather slow, both teams evidently saving themselves for the final. Purse for Plucher netted the first goal and McKay for Frank opened up things shortly after. While of Pincher got another making it 2-1 at the end of the period. McLeod of Frank received a nasty cut on the face but was able to continue after having it dressed.

In the third and last period Frank certainly did try hard to overcome Pincher's lead but were only successful in getting one goal. McLeod and Hughes doing the trick after a nice piece of combination. McLeough, Plucher's goal keeper, did some fine work in this period and the Pincher team had him to thank for the final score of 3-2.

A feature of the game was the work of D. M. Ormond who acted as judge of the game. His decisions were right or not, but one thing is certain and that is that Mr. Ormond is one of the first men to ever act in the double capacity of judge of play and coacher to his own team and get away with it. Mr. Ormond was not satisfactory to the referee. The line up was as follows:

Frank McGowan goal McCullough
Gillespie point Gillespie-Ormond
Rourke c. point Tucker White
McLeod r. wing McCleugh
Daper l. wing Daper
Seott r. wing Purkiss
Referee - M. G. Rhynes. Judge of play - D. M. Ormond.
